

GROUP REFLECTION

As a group, we had already been working together for the last assignment and felt that for the most part that everyone was able to do their work on time, had no trouble showing up to the meetings, were able to rely on other team members for any help as well as just overall everyone was very respectful with each other. So, when this assignment came around, we felt that we would have no issues again. Yonas oversaw the assigning of roles and was able to discuss with each member about any issues they had with their positions and although nobody seemed to have any issues with each members assignments, the careful way in which Yonas was able to cater to everyone and always ask if any group members had any issues. Jonathon did a great job in setting up the GitHub repository as well as handling the formatting and placing together of information for the website. In addition to that he still was able to effectively handle his work on the Roles and Testing section. Khiem was responsible for the Skills and Jobs section as well as the Group Processes and Communications section. He did not have any issues with the sections he was given and completed his work in an adequate time and fashion. He also was someone who was essential for helping Jonathon acquire images for the website as well as adding any further information to the website. Alan was responsible for the Scope and Limits, Tools and Technologies and Risks section. We thought that this would be a huge challenge for Alan and we were surprised to find that he was not only completing his work during the assigned weeks, but also adding really detailed explanations and information which was a really big help that he was someone that is able to not only finish his work on time but do it with the utmost care. Finally, Yonas was responsible for the Aims section as well as the reworking of the Project idea plus overseeing the meetings and other work that needed to be completed. He was the team leader and did an amazing job as he made an instant change to the project idea after the feedback received for Assignment 2 and adapted to the sudden change of reworking the idea very well. All in all, each member of the team once again showed they're worth and did their tasks without delay or complaint. One thing that we could have improved on though is maybe not really leaving each member to do so much work, although they were capable, it may have been a good idea to help each other out some more. One thing that we have learned about groups is that each group member must put in their best effort and for the group to really work well together, communication is key. In our repository, there are many documents that show how well we have worked on our own individual sections and that amount of work that we have listed there, show how much work each member of the group has placed into this assignment and the care and respect they have for their work.
